A New Member of the Family

Last week, we added a new member to our family: an eleven-week old Border Terrier puppy named Wrigley. (Check out the pictures on my website, www.tracygarrett.com.) He is so cute, and too smart for my own good. He learns quickly, and is already deciding if he wants to bother using all that new information he has acquired—he is a terrier, after all. Stubborn breed! Our comfortable do-what-we-want-when-we-want-because-we-don't-have-children life is over. Everything revolves around the new baby in the house. We eat when he sleeps, we've made umpteen trips outside on the off chance that glance toward the door meant something, and we're getting up at the first sign of light in the sky, since that's when Wrigs decides it's time to go out--and you all know how well I'm coping, as I am SO not a morning person. But I must say, he's a wonderful addition to the family. Now if I can only live through the teething phase!

On the writing front, I'm gearing up to promote Touched By Love, which comes out in a little more than five months. The galleys – those are the page proofs that I get to review one last time before the book goes to print – arrived this week, so I have several hours of work left to do, then the book is finished! I'm also closing in on the end of Wolf's story. I hope to have good news about that story to share with all of you soon.
